

Clinical Genetics and Bioinformatics Summer Program

CGB

The five-day program is designed for undergraduates interested in learning more about human genomics, bioinformatics, genetic counseling, and precision medicine. CGB will expose individuals to fundamental principles of human genetics and cutting-edge applications of human genomics, and will enlighten participants about exciting career opportunities in clinical genetics and genomics. The program will include distance classroom and laboratory components.

2021 Dates

- Session #1 (online).....June 28-July 2
- Session #2 (online)..... July 12-16

What You Will Learn

- Demonstrate an understanding of genetics and genomics core concepts and principles.
- Understand the increasing role of genetic providers with regards to interpreting genetic testing and providing risk assessment, education, and support for patients and families diagnosed with inherited conditions.
- Discuss the impact of genomics and pharmacogenomics on health care.
- Describe the various technologies used for genetic sequencing, variant interpretation, and genomic data visualization.
- Discuss how genomic data analytics can be used to provide actionable clinical recommendations for patients.
